RAF Raids Foe's Big Naval Bases

Bremen, Wilhelmshaven Rocked By Missiles During Night; Huge Industrial Districts Hit; London Damaged By Attackers

LONDON, Oct. 9.—Germany's great naval bases at Bremen and Wilhelmshaven were rocked by British bombs in terrific attacks by the Royal Air Force last night and early today, the air ministry announced today.

In one of the war's greatest British counter-thrusts, RAF bombers smashed dozens of vital industrial areas in the Reich and continued incessant blasting of French channel invasion ports.

The mighty Krupp works at Essen, the Fokker plant at Amsterdam, the Goodyear factory at Mannheim were among the targets.

An official statement, outlining the fierce assaults, said: "Aircraft of the bomber and coastal commands yesterday attacked the ports of Boulogne and Lorient.

"Last night the main bomber offensive was directed against the naval bases at Bremen and Wilhelmshaven, where extensive damage was done.

"Other forces attacked military objectives over a wide area of western Germany and Holland as well as enemy-occupied France.

"Targets included oil refineries at Hamburg and Gelsenkirchen, a power station at Kiel, the Krupp works at Essen, a metal works at Hanau, the Fokker plant at Amsterdam, the Goodyear plant at Mannheim, a factory at Greinburg and other military objectives.

"Airdromes Blasted
"Several enemy airdromes were vigorously attacked during the night, and assaults against the channel ports continued.

"All our aircraft returned."
In a statement amplifying the communiqué, the Air Ministry News Service said that tons of high explosive bombs and hundreds of incendiaries were dropped on the Bremen target area last night and that more than 15 tons of high explosives were dropped on Wilhelmshaven.

The attack on Bremen lasted for an hour and a half, and objectives were hit time and again by heavy bombs, the news service said.

Fires and explosions mushroomed out below the attacking planes, and one pilot reported a building which was directly hit burst into flames and exploded fiercely, throwing debris hundreds of feet into the air.

"Fires were visible long after the raiders departed," the news service reported.

The attack on Wilhelmshaven was equally punishing, the news service said, despite a terrific anti-aircraft barrage.

The flagship harbor was attacked.

Shortly after the accident, which happened about 5 a. m., a passing automobile driven by B. L. Gilbert, Dorset, struck the wreckage. Little damage was reported done to the Gilbert car, however.

Mrs. Mary Condos, of Columbus, was released from Berger Hospital Monday night after she was treated for deep scalp lacerations received in an auto accident on Route 23, south of Circleville.

Deputy Sheriff Earl Weaver said Mrs. Condos riding with her son, Clyde Williams, of Columbus, attempted to open the door of the car to discard a cigarette and was thrown from the moving auto into the road.

Two heavily loaded trucks crashed on Route 23, 12 miles north of Circleville, early Wednesday, sending one driver to Mercy Hospital, Columbus, to be treated for cuts and bruises and a possible skull fracture.

According to state highway patrolmen, Gerald Riffe, of Hamden, was traveling north with his truck driver, Robert Norton, also of Hamden, when his truck loaded with coal collided with a southbound truck loaded with vegetables, owned by Leland Perry and driven by Russell Camp, both of Sandusky.

Cause of the accident has not been definitely determined. Riffe told Deputy Sheriff Earl Weaver that he was asleep when the accident happened. His driver who was taken to the hospital has not yet been questioned concerning the accident.

Camp told Deputy Weaver that he noticed the coal truck traveling back and forth across the road and that he had tried to drive his truck out of the way. He said he believed the driver had fallen asleep. The impact of the collision turned the coal truck over in the road, demolishing it, according to Deputy Weaver. The vegetable truck, carrying cabbage, pears and tomatoes, was also considerably damaged.

AMERICANS ASK CHANCE TO FLEE FAR EAST CITY

Authorities Busy Looking For Terrorists Sent Into District

HOLIDAY MAY BE VITAL

Two Gunboats Present To Remove Some Persons From Danger

SHANGHAI, Oct. 9.—As American residents of Shanghai cabled Washington for sufficient ships to enable wholesale evacuation, this famous city on the Whangpoo was turned into an armed camp tonight.

Tension mounted steadily and fears of violent incidents grew, while Shanghai authorities took all possible measures to protect the foreign population from possible molestation.

The 10th of October is both a Chinese and Japanese national holiday. Observers have long feared that hotbeds might take advantage of the coincidence to touch off a riot.

All Shanghai volunteers were mobilized, police reservists called up and barbed-wire barricades erected on all except the three main thoroughfares of the city.

Motorists Searched
Motorists were stopped and searched, while police scoured famed Nanking Road, probing into rooming houses and hotels for suspicious persons and possible arms caches.

Authorities particularly looked for terrorists who may have been sent into Shanghai both from Chungking, seat of the Chinese Nationalist government, and from Nanking, where a Japanese-puppet government holds sway.

The appeal to Washington was sent by the American Association, composed of most of the American residents of Shanghai, on receipt of advice from the consulate for all United States citizens to leave China, Japan and Manchukuo without delay.

The United States gunboats Isabel and Luzon, carrying supplies for missionary hospitals at Nanking and Wuhu, steamed up river during the afternoon. It was believed they would take aboard any Americans desiring to return to Shanghai, including a number of Standard Oil employees and their families.

Meanwhile, from Hong Kong it was reported that 1,600 American residents—including 950 of Chinese descent—had been advised by the consulate to leave if they have no urgent reason for remaining.

BOSS OF REDLEG TEAM JUMPS ON WILLKIE WAGON

DETROIT, Oct. 9.—Manager Bill McKennie of the champion Cincinnati Reds will postpone his vacation in his home town of Wilkinsburg, Pa., long enough to take the stump for Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican presidential nominee, the Detroit Times said today.

McKenzie, the newspaper reported, said he was ready to go anywhere the Republican national committee thinks a word from the manager of the baseball's world champions might get Willkie a vote.

McKenzie was quoted by the newspaper as saying: "It may be tough going but then a lot of people thought these Redlegs couldn't whip an American League team. And I guess we did it, didn't we boys?"

Rhineland Celebrates, And How!

CINCINNATI, Oct. 9.—They call Cincinnati the queen of the west and the old gal is certainly nursing a terrific hangover this morning after a wild night of celebration in the downtown streets, at bars, restaurants and hotel lobbies.

Most of the men, women and children who turned the heart of the town into a bedlam from five o'clock yesterday afternoon until long after midnight were not around when the Reds won a tainted title from the Chicago White Sox 21 years ago. But they know there is nothing phony about this one and their joy is unrestrained.

The police gave up trying to preserve order after the dinner hour when thousands of motorists drove into the downtown streets, parked and tied down their automobile horns.

The reaction to this series among baseball people is that the Reds, a well-balanced team with good pitching, beat the best of the poorest lot of first division teams assembled in the American League in several years. There is also a feeling that the National League victory was a good thing for baseball and provides an excuse for continuing the World Series.

Bad as the Yankees were they probably could have beaten the Reds with just fair pitching. Connie Mack says they will win again next year and maybe that will mean a return to a short World Series. However, the reorganized Yankees do not figure to have the walkaways that they enjoyed when Ruth and Gehrig were at their peaks or when they got that tight pitching for the new crop of sluggers headed by Joe DiMaggio.

This series enriched both leagues by recording a new high in gate receipts and the magnates liked that. The greatest part of their swag was snatched from the last three games in which the players did not share. No wonder they do not care to return to the old Yankee custom of compressing a World Series into four games.

SHIFT OF CLASS MUST BE FILED IN CONSCRIPTION

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Draft officials today took steps to insure prompt reclassification of men under the Selective Service Act by recommending stern treatment of registrants who fail to report changes in their status.

Regulations promulgated by the President require a man to notify his local board of any alteration of his conditions. Thus, if he is deferred because of a dependent and that dependent dies or leaves him, he must tell the board even if such a step would move him up to class 1-A and make him liable for immediate service.

While the regulations do not set up any specific penalty for failure to make such reports, draft officials pointed out in extreme cases such a failure might be regarded as draft evasion and subject the man to a possible five years in prison. Privately they said, however, that the local boards in such cases probably would simply induct the delinquent immediately no matter in what order he might otherwise be called.

Meanwhile, there was a general speedup of activity at conscription headquarters today as officials prepared for the gigantic task of registering some 16,400,000 young Americans just one week from today and then selecting those to be inducted.

COLUMBUS, Oct. 9.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., son of the President, will speak on the Ohio State University campus Oct. 17 under the sponsorship of the Young Democratic Club of the university, it was announced today.

SOLONS TO STAY ON JOB DESPITE PLEA TO RECESS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—A coalition of house Republicans and dissident Democrats today blocked proposals of congressional leaders for a recess until November 18, with angry Democrats threatening to keep the house in session each day even though the legislative program has been completed.

Speaker Rayburn and Democratic Leader McCormack of the house were expected to make a formal announcement today of abandonment of plans for a recess.

With Republicans standing solidly against adjournment, a canvass made by 14 regional Democratic whips showed that the party leadership lacked 20 votes of a majority necessary for an adjournment resolution. A reversal of the situation, however, was still possible.

A group of Democrats started forcing quorum calls of the house—with members being required to answer in person or be reported absent—as punishment for the Republican attitude. The quorum calls yesterday showed Rep. Joseph Martin, Mass., Republican leader, and Rep. Ditter, Penna., Republican congressional campaign chairman, absent.

Martin, before he temporarily left the city, asserted that he would be present whenever any important matter arose.

"We plan to force quorum calls every day just to show up the hypocrisy of the situation," said Rep. Schulte (D) Indiana. "The Republicans yell for congress to stay in session, then a lot of them go home to campaign."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—The White House today announced that President Roosevelt had signed the excess profits tax bill designed to raise $1,000,000,000 yearly to help finance defense and to prevent creation of "war millionaires."

Berlin Declares Soldiers Will Not Bother Any Anti-Germans

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The Evening Standard's diplomatic correspondent reported today that Russia has massed troops on the Romanian border.

However, the report said, they will not move unless Germany and Italy attempt to split up the Balkans between them.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 9.—Sir Reginald Hoare, British minister to Bucharest, today threatened rupture of Anglo-Romanian relations unless the Romanian government satisfactorily explains the presence of German troops in that country, it was reported in Budapest today.

BERLIN, Oct. 9.—The "model army" that Germany is sending into Romania to train that country's forces is now en route by the Danube River, informed quarters disclosed today.

The German forces are moving into Romania via the Danube, it was stated, because the waterway has been "internationalized" and its use does not require complicated preliminary negotiations.

The exact time that the German troops are expected to arrive in Romania was not revealed, but it was understood that advance guard units of some 4,000 or 5,000 men are likely to appear there shortly if they have not already reached river points on the Romanian border.

Reports Doubtful
(Editor's Note: In London a foreign office spokesman announced that Britain considered reports of German troops in Romania exaggerated and that more complete details were awaited.)

Since Italy also joined in the German guarantee to Romania, it can be assumed that some detachments of Italian troops are en route to Romania or will soon follow.

Authentic German quarters asserted emphatically: "Our troops are not going to" (Continued on Page Two)

$10,000 DAMAGE RESULTS FROM FIRE IN BARRACKS

DOVER, Oct. 9.—Fire today caused $10,000 damage to the barracks and equipment of Battery F of the Ohio National Guard at the Tuscarawas County fairgrounds.

Capt. Arthur Limbach said he believed the fire started from an overheated stove. He said four 155 millimeter guns were damaged.

Dover firemen fought the blaze for more than an hour.

McKENNIE TO WRITE OWN TICKET, AVERS CROSLLEY

CINCINNATI, Oct. 9.—"Bill McKennie will manage the Reds as long as I own them," Powell Crosley, Jr., owner of the World's champions, said today.

"Bill can write his own ticket from here on," the jubilant owner declared. While Cincinnati's celebration went into its second day, a double force of street cleaners attempted to "keep ahead" of the rejoicing fans who milled about downtown streets.

Romania in an occupational capacity, but as instructors and as a model army at the invitation of Romania for reasons outlined previously."

On this basis, it was stated, internal affairs in Romania will not be touched by Germany and the presence of Reich troops there, for example will not affect the status of Polish refugees in Romania such as former President Ignace Moscicki, former Foreign Minister Josef Beck and Marshal Edward Smigly-Ridz.

Similarly, it was indicated, hundreds of refugees of other "anti-German nationalities" in Romania will be left undisturbed, including Britons still resident there.

tacked among other targets, it was said. One British pilot eluded two German night fighters over the Frisian Islands.

108 Killed in Raid

In one of the most pitiful disasters of the war, 108 patients—mostly old men and women—were killed or injured by a bomb which struck a London hospital during the long Nazi raid on the capital last night and early today.

Revelation of the extent of the casualties in the hospital came late this morning as bomb explosions and heavy anti-aircraft fire were heard on the outskirts of the city. There was no new air raid alarm in the capital, however.

It appeared that a tremendous air battle was in progress above the clouds.

(Editor's Note: A Berlin announcement said strong forces of German planes took off during the morning to resume attacks on Britain.)

The bomb that hit the hospital fell on the center of the institution's main building, tearing out three wards and reducing them to a heap of debris. Fire broke out but was subdued quickly.

All the victims were helpless invalids, doomed by their ailments to lives of chronic illness.

Three hundred patients in other wards were safe. But several nurses and other staff members were killed outright.

During the intense night onslaught which followed yesterday's colossal attacks more than 100 separate points in the London area, the nearby home counties and in southern England were bombed by Nazi raiders.

BERLIN, Oct. 9—Violent German aerial attacks on British shipping, industries, troop concentrations and airbases were reported today by the German high command.

In a communique which told of daring attacks on heavily protected British shipping, the high command claimed Royal Air Force fire.

NEW DEALERS BOOT THE BALL

Like a rookie in the big league Wendell Willkie has booted a few. And the opposition bleachers have been giving him the Bronx cheer, led by Boss Flynn of the noble professionals who would do it, oh, so much better!

But in Willkie's case the boots are not all loss. They prove beyond the peradventure of a doubt that he is not a politician. And a lot of folks are fed up with politicians. That is proved by the immense popularity of the movie film, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington", the young Senator who did everything wrong except to be false to himself.

The opposition, in the person of Henry Agard Wallace, ex-Republican, begins to fall over its own big feet. I refer to his acceptance speech in which he implied that everybody who votes for Willkie is a Hitler stooge, even if he is too dumb to know it. And "the Roosevelts" telephoned "the Wallaces" that it was marvelous oratory.

That sort of hitting below the belt has been tried before. President Wilson in 1918 asked that only Democrats be sent to Congress. The inference was that he could not count on the loyalty of non-Democrats, and the folks didn't like it. The House went Republican and out here in the corn belt it went a-roaring. The referee declared that Wilson lost on a foul.

With Henry calling the signals the New Dealers are now questioning Willkie's loyalty because his grandparents were Germans. If that sort of smear goes for Willkie, it goes for every American who has a German grandfather or mother. And if I know any political onions that is not a bush league error. It is a big time boot.

Why did our noble Wallace mention Hitler's name 23 times and Stalin's name not once? And why is it that it is only when Hitler commits an atrocity that the alarm bells ring in Washington? The answer is plain to everyone who thinks; first, the Communists have greater influence in Washington than the Bund; and second, the natural revulsion against Nazi tyranny is being played to win certain votes in a domestic election. But Stalin has butchered his millions. And who of the great hearts who have Wallace bled complain about the Nero of the Kremlin? It is a pretty sleazy business.

The 30,000,000 Americans of German ancestry are not going to like these innuendoes against their patriotism. Their loyalty was demonstrated during the World War when Wendell Willkie and other grandsons of Germans volunteered for overseas service.

Willkie's grandparents came to this country when Carl Schurz came. Schurz was a good enough American to be a member of the convention in 1860 which nominated Abraham Lincoln, was Major General at Gettysburg, Minister to Spain, U. S. Senator, Member of the Cabinet, and later, be-

If I were Henry Agard Wallace or Boss Flynn I would go mighty slow in smearing an American simply because his grandfather was born east of France. I am dead certain that Jim Farley wouldn't stand for it ten seconds, if he were managing the team. Which he is not.

No, Willkie has not made the only blunders. There was the stab-in-the-back speech also—another excellent example of how not to run a campaign.

If this sort of stuff had been a rookie's blunder I would say little about it. But the professionals in the New Deal are drunk with power. This smearing of a loyal American and millions of his fellow citizens who made the same choice of grandfathers, shows signs of whispering its way all through this campaign. It began before Willkie was nominated and it is to the great credit of Indiana's Democratic Senator, Fred Van Nuys, that he repudiated it, with adjectives.

Willkie Continues Tour, After Sniping at F. D. R.

Willkie Motorcade in Connecticut, Oct. 9.—Through the "land of steady habits" Wendell Willkie rolled by automobile today hoping that the habit of voting for him in November is as steady as it was in June when Connecticut's 16 votes in the Republican convention came to him on the first ballot and never wavered.

But before departing New York for the New England invasion, Willkie trained heavy siege guns directly on President Roosevelt and demanded that he reveal to the nation whether there were any secret international understandings to put America into the current European war.

Willkie again repeated his pledge that under him there would be no "appeasement of the dictators" and promised that if elected president he would give the people themselves the opportunity to decide whether or not to go to war.

In this speech before a cheering crowd in Roosevelt High School Willkie flatly charged the Roosevelt administration was "not telling the truth" and was therefore "not qualified" to head the country in time of crisis.

"I want to talk to you about the simple subject of telling the truth," Willkie said. "The New Deal and the smart fellows in it believe that truth telling is old fashioned. I believe that telling the truth is an essential fundamental of government."

"I have been asking the President to tell me, and the people how he stands on the third term. Now I want to ask him about a fourth term."

"An administration that is not telling the truth is not qualified to head the country in time of crisis or any other time. I want to ask the President, and I demand an answer."

"Are there any international understandings to put America into the war that we citizens do not know about?"

"Maybe we people will not approve of them, but we should know about them. We don't belong to the government; the government belongs to us. I have been repeatedly asked in my trips through the country if any such secret understandings exist. The only answer I can give is that I do not know. But I want to know."

"If this country has to fight it is not the public officials who will do the fighting. It is the people of this country who will fight. If you elect me president, the people of the country will be the ones to decide whether they will be involved in war."

The candidate urged his hearers not to be "misled by the high-sounding words of the New Deal" and of Mr. Roosevelt.

"His pose, and the pose of the New Deal, are all fakes, shames and misrepresentations," Willkie charged.

A president-elect does not receive an official notification of his election.

BIGGEST NET

The largest network on the air today—115 stations over the Mutual Broadcasting System—will carry "Double or Nothing," the new half hour quiz show purchased by Richard Marvin, radio director of William Esty and Company, for the makers of Feenamint.

Heard Sundays from 6:00 to 6:30 p. m. Double or Nothing is a quiz show with a new twist. Broadcast from the theater in the Barbizon Plaza hotel, the show works like this:

Contestants are chosen from the studio audience, each contestant being presented with a little strong box.

If the contestant answers his first question correctly, Walter Compton, master of ceremonies, gives him five silver dollars and one minute to expand extemporaneously on the question. While the contestant is speaking, Compton keeps handing him more money and at the end of his minute's talk, the contestant gets still another question. If he answers this second question correctly, he gets double the amount of money the emcee has given him during the speech. If he answers incorrectly, he loses the whole sum with the exception of the original five silver dollars. The money lost by contestants is turned over to any charity organization.

BETTY IN DEBUT

Bob Burns will help 12 year old Betty Brewer and her brother and sister, Sonny and Ienne, along the road to success by presenting them in the Music Hall on Thursday. Walter Brennan, hot trumpeter Wingy Manone, and opera star Dusolina Gianini will also be guests on the program over the NBC red network at 9:00 p. m. that regularly features Dorothy Lamour, the Music Maids and John Scott Trotter's orchestra.

Betty Brewer made her movie debut in "Rangers of Fortune" which has just been released. Her history reads like a fairy tale but it is absolutely authentic.

One of the most versatile character actors in Hollywood is Walter Brennan who has just registered a success in "The Westerner" as wily old Judge Bean. He'll be interviewed by Bob Burns and comment on the trumpeting of Wingy Manone who is a fugitive from Bing Crosby's last picture, "Rhythm on the River."

Dorothy Lamour will sing three new numbers and John Scott Trotter's orchestra will play "Begin the Beguine." As a reward for their superlative harmonizing in the accompaniment parts, the Music Maids will be featured all by themselves in "The Ferryboat Serenade."

BRICKER, DAVEY TOURING STATE IN VOTE APPEAL

COLUMBUS, Oct. 9.—With election day only a month away, the tempo of the 1940 campaign increased today as candidates swung through the state on personal appearance tours in quest of votes.

In a speech at Oberlin College, Governor Bricker, seeking his second term, called for a check on the authority of the federal government to prevent it from "becoming a burden." Bricker's appearance was sponsored by the Student Republican Club.

Bricker asserted that Ohio was "doing its best to maintain local government in the face of a federal policy of centralization."

Earlier at Elyria, Bricker told a Lorain County group that his administration had provided more money for schools than the administration of his opponent, former Gov. Martin L. Davey.

Meanwhile, Davey made personal appearances in northwestern Ohio counties. In his talks, Davey attacked the administration of various state departments under Bricker. In most of his talks, Davey has accused Bricker of "chiseling" on payments to Ohio unemployed, failing to provide adequate relief, and refusing to pay maximum pensions of $40 to aged.

SOY BEAN SUIT

WHEN it was first announced, a good many years ago, that the Germans were making clothing out of wood, other people found it difficult to understand how the clothing could be warm and flexible. When our own rayons began to be well made, they understood. For the cellulose which goes into those delightful new fabrics has so far come mostly from trees, though the newest ones seem to be products of coal, air and water.

Now people believe whatever the scientists tell them. Especially they are ready to believe anything about soy beans. So when they hear that one of Henry Ford's latest experiments deals with getting cloth from soy beans, they take it without scepticism. A suit of clothes and a necktie have so far been turned over to Henry as samples from his laboratories.

What with soy beans, sour milk and cellulose, a few grains of salt and a little coal tar, life could almost go on functioning without anything else. Artificial rubber for our cars, made cheaply and in plenty, should be next. Could that be made out of soy beans, too?

DESTRUCTION FOR U. S.

WE see by our Italian contemporary, Mussolini's Popolo d' Italia, that the United States is doomed to "go down to defeat and destruction" if it enters the European war.

The answer to that is that we are not planning to enter the European war. We are planning and arming to defend this hemisphere against European aggression. Also to defend against Asiatic aggression the Philippines, which we acquired by purchase before Japan had embarked on her career of Asiatic imperialism, and which we are freely granting their liberty if they want it, plus protection if they prefer to stick with us—as they probably do now.

The same newspaper, in which the Duce professes to speak for the Italian people, says the new triple alliance of Germany, Italy and Japan is "a great peace instrument" which we Americans might change into a war instrument.

The Duce there is merely turning the facts inside out. That three-nation alliance is a great war instrument which the dictators, if they wanted to, could change in five minutes into a peace instrument.

The dictators now seem to glory in the enemies they create. Germany tried that once before, and lost.

With dictatorship, as with vice, people "first endure, then pit, then embrace."

There were too many Ethiopians in the woodpile at Dakar.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

EARLY in his far western presidential campaign tour Wendell L. Willkie made a speech in Los Angeles, devoted mainly to summarizing those of the New Deal's policies and activities which, in his opinion, have proved to be detrimental to a satisfactory business revival.

Among various items, he mentioned "punitive taxes." He also referred to "investigations and other nuisances."

If elected to the White House, he said he proposes the "immediate establishment of a special commission to study the whole tax question."

In other words, supposing that he wins, one of the first things he'll do to put a stop to the investigation nuisance, as a conspicuous pest to business, will be to start a large-sized investigation—of the tax question.

Caring investigations by an investigation isn't necessarily inconsistent, but at first thought it does seem slightly so. It's homeopathic, anyway. "Like cures like," you know, according to the late Doc Hahnemann's theory. Allopaths, though, don't indorse it.

INVESTIGATIONS AND INVESTIGATIONS

The fact is that the average congressional investigation is a bad bother to the folk who are being investigated, and there certainly are cases in which they don't deserve to be bothered.

It's like this:

Some senator or representative thinks he sees an evil, which ought to be uncovered and corrected. Perhaps it isn't really an evil. Perhaps the lawmaker who raises a howl about it merely has a bug on that subject. Nevertheless, he gets an investigating committee established, with himself as chairman of it. He summons witnesses. They're mostly individuals on whom he's trying to pin a malefaction of one sort or another. It follows that they balk at convincing themselves. The chairman, striving to make out his case, usually browbeats and bullies them; judicial rules of procedure don't signify at a congressional quiz.

So a lot of legislative investigations don't make much of a hit, because they're too manifestly unfair, with the public generally. And the victim-witnesses, of course, feel outraged.

OCCASIONALLY THEY'RE FAIR

Yet now and then a congressional inquiry is constructively on the level.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming, as chairman of the Temporary National Economic Committee, including members of both congressional chambers and of representatives from several of the cabinet departments and executive sub-agencies, has been running one for a good many months past.

While that investigation was in its incipency I heard Senator O. Mahoney explain what his aim was. His proposition was that this country, within the memory of a still living generation, has been transformed from a pretty primitive outfit into a highly complicated organization. He submitted that we haven't readjusted ourselves to changed conditions, and urged us to find out what changes in our system are desirable—or imperative. He didn't outline any particular program. All he asked for was information (understanding) to guide us.

He's conducted that investigation along this precise line. No witness has been bulldozed. The witnesses simply have been consulted as experts.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

DIES EVIDENCE SECRET

WASHINGTON—The Dies investigating committee now has documentary evidence of Nazi fifth column operations in the U. S. so explosive that its publication might lead to a complete rupture of diplomatic relations with Germany.

Because of this likelihood of international complications the committee has been nervously sitting on the load of dynamite, uncertain what to do. It has consulted the State Department, which is just as jittery itself.

In fact, even more so. The Department foresees the inevitable necessity of demanding the recall of a number of German diplomatic representatives, with certain retaliation by Berlin by the ousting of U. S. officials. In the present delicate state of U. S.-Axis relations, the Department doesn't want to run that risk.

So on its urgent advice, the committee is sitting tight and continuing its secret probe of the subversive activities. The documentary evidence in the possession of the committee is staggering. It definitely establishes:

1. That the Nazi government is directly supervising and financing a nationwide fifth column campaign to oppose and obstruct the defense program, the U. S. Government's foreign policy and aid to Great Britain.

2. That this activity is being carried on through German consulates and German-controlled papers, plus propaganda agencies of various kinds.

3. That Nazi consuls get detailed instructions from Berlin through regular short-wave broadcasts in code.

COLUMN FUEHRER

Suspected master mind of the Nazi fifth column is Dr. Manfred Zapp, head of the Trans-Ocean News Service, a propaganda outfit with offices in New York and Washington. Zapp came to this country after being booted out of South Africa by the British Government.

Trans-Ocean records seized by the committee show that Zapp is being financed by Berlin. He has received a number of bank drafts, among them one for $30,000 directly from the Bank of Berlin, and also considerable sums from the Bank of Mexico, which have been traced to German sources. Copies of letters written and received by Zapp, in the possession of the committee, end with the salutation "Heil Hitler".

Similar evidence involves the German Railroads Information Office, a professed tourist agency at 11 West 57th St., N. Y.

HOT CONSULS

Two of the consuls implicated in the evidence the committee has turned over to the State Department are Captain Fritz Wiedemann, at San Francisco, and Herbert Scholz, at Boston. Letters show both Nazis up to their armpits in fifth column enterprises.

Wiedemann, Hitler's World War captain, is recognized in diplomatic circles as his personal representative in this country. Situated on the West Coast, his role now is especially important as the result of the Axis-Jap alliance. Scholz is credited with being the guiding hand behind the American Fellowship Forum.

DIET AND HEALTH

The "R" Months

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

"OYSTERS in their way," said Stephen Paget, "are quite as wonderful as poets, saints and men of science."

The season of the year has come again when, according to proverbial hygiene, it is safe to eat oysters—we are at the beginning of the month with "r" in them. The prohibition is old-fashioned—most oysters today are grown in cultivated beds, the waters of which are federal inspected. So the danger of contamination that used to apply to warr: months no longer holds. But the spawning season interferes with their edibility in midsummer.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Oysters are among man's oldest foods. They are fastened for life to one spot and an easy prey. The beetle-browed polioleth crept down to the water's edge of the dawn oceans and snaked him off as fine an epicurean feast as anyone could want. Great heaps of oyster shells—middens—piled up by prehistoric man can be seen, many on the coasts of Florida. Oysters were delicacies in Greece and Rome. Pliny records the scientific cultivation of oysters in the first century B.C. In the days of Augustus, one Sergius Orata made a fortune as oyster purveyor to the aristocracy of Rome.

Good Food

The modern scientific dietitian supports in every respect the epicure's delight in oysters. The composition of oysters is:

The carbohydrates come from the liver, the dark mass in the center. The high carbohydrate content must be reckoned with for diabetics.

The oyster is very easily digested if taken raw. Three medium sized oysters are disposed of by the stomach in 1 1/2 hours. Cooking makes them less digestible.

Their nutritive value is not high. Fourteen oysters have not quite as much nourishment as one egg, 225 equal a pound of beef. So it is not surprising to hear of enormous quantities of oysters being eaten at one sitting. Brilliant Savarin relates of his acquaintance with a man who would eat a gross and then follow up with a heavy dinner.

The oyster is an expensive form of nutrition. A day's ration of protein from oysters would cost about seven dollars.

Spawn in Summer

The oyster begins to spawn in midsummer. The eggs have been held in the gills, and when the temperature of the water is about 70° the larval young are ejected as little ciliated spheres. They dart briskly about for several days (spat) and then encounter a stone or ledge to which they attach themselves and begin to form a shell. From this first home they never move again. They have a long period of maturation. It is usually four or five years before they are ready for your table.

I would that all the guests at a dinner party had as interesting a life history as the oyster and contributed as much to the enjoyment of the occasion.

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

TOMMY, standing anxiously by the gate, saw Coral and Gun in the half-light, and came hurrying around. He paused by the inert Giuseppe, and collected his rifle and bandolier. Coral did the same with Slim. With rifle in hand and the bandolier over her shoulders, she looked like a vivandiere—a sort of modern Cigaret, Gun thought. Then, remembering the fate of Cigaret, he hoped it was not an omen.

"More good work," grinned Tommy, as he met them. Holding the rifle in his hands, he was happier than ever. "What next?"

"Back to the bungalow—I'm not sure how long Otto will be quiet. We'd better tie him up."

"They ran back to the gate, and Gun said to Coral:

"You stay here and watch. Give us the tip at once if you see or hear anything moving anywhere."

"They went inside, and deftly trussed Otto up, complete with gag. Then they turned off the light, closed the door, and hurried back to join Coral. She had seen and heard nothing.

"And now?" asked Tommy.

"Give me those keys, Coral."

She handed them to him, and Gun, who had seen them before, selected two or three from the bunch. The others he passed back to Coral.

"I'm going to take a chance and raid Trent's office," he announced.

"There are one or two documents I must have, I think. You two can come with me as far as the wooden fence, but no farther. If you hear any disturbance, make straight for the arsenal—Coral knows the way. Understand?"

"Yes, but—what about you?"

"Leave me to look after myself. SOMEBODY'S got to get home to tell the tale. You know what to do, of course, Coral—if you arrive home without me."

"Of course," she answered, "but—"

"They had been walking while they were whispering, and now they were at the gate in the wooden fence. Gun made a sign for them to wait.

"No buts at all," he said curtly.

"You know what to do, and that's that. I'll be as quick as I can."

Inside the fence there was not a soul to be seen. Gun ran on tiptoe to the living quarters and Trent's habitation. The outer door was unlocked, and using one of the keys he had taken on the inner. Gun stood once more in Trent's office.

Hastily he opened the drawers and took what he wanted—some note books, a code book, a map, a list of names and addresses. He was stuffing them into his pockets when a stealthy sound outside caught his ear—and it was then that he remembered that he had left the outer door ajar. If there was a watchman about . . .

There was! An unmistakable sound in the passage made Gun spring silently from the desk and make for the door. He wanted to get there first—to strike as the door was opened—but he was too late. The door was kicked back violently, and a dark-faced man stood there, a revolver ready in his hand.

The two shots were simultaneous—but Gun sprang aside as he fired from the hip. The other in the doorway couldn't do that.

He yelled with pain as he fell and, almost before he had touched the floor Gun had gripped his collar and dragged him into the room.

Then, springing the lock, Gun shut the door behind him and ran for it.

Now, as he ran, Gun heard shouts and the sound of opening windows.

Gun ran for the gate and his life, crouching low as he went, and expecting the vicious hum of a bullet at any moment. It did not come, but as he ran Gun remembered something else. Coral and Tommy were well on the way to the arsenal by now, and he wasn't certain where it was.

But when he got outside the gate he could see the others in the distance, running hard. He sprinted after them, and was gaining on them when he heard behind him the zip of bullets in the air. Then he heard a voice shouting, then silence. He guessed that they were not recognizable at that distance, and the gang were afraid of shooting at friends. Besides, to them it must look as though he was pursuing the other two.

The two shots were simultaneous—but Gun sprang aside as he fired from the hip.

At the sound of the shots Tommy had turned, and so had seen him coming. Now they slackened to allow him to catch up with them, and Coral gasped:

"Nearly there—come on!"

And Tommy, looking back, added:

"There're after us!"

Gun looked, and saw three or four men in various stages of undress, but armed, sprinting in pursuit.

They ran on, and came to the steep side of the hill, and a heavy door crudely camouflaged with streaks of paint.

"Here we are," said Coral, and put a key to the lock.

"And now," said Gun, softly, "We'll show 'em a thing or two."

Lit up by the beams of two torches, the arsenal showed a workman-like interior. Actually it was little more than a cave dug into the hillside, but the walls, arching together at the top, and the floor had been concreted, to resist damp. In boxes and cases the munitions, mostly made up, but some still in the raw, were piled near the walls. Near the doorway, by themselves, four large sacks were piled against the wall.

"What's in those?" Gun asked sharply.

"Concrete," Coral replied, "Left over from when they did the walls. So one of the men told me."

"That's a blessing," Gun exclaimed. "They're worth more to us than bags of gold, at the moment—we've got to make a breast-plate of something." He stopped suddenly, and stared at Coral.

"What about the guard you said was always here? Where is he?"

"Oh, I'd clean forgotten him," Tommy whispered around, and sprang for the door. As he reached it there came a sharp exclamation from outside, followed by a shot. Tommy jerked back—then thrust his rifle around the door post and fired. There was a groan.

"First dead 'un to us," said Tommy, grimly.

"You're wrong—second," said Gun. "I'm afraid I had to do one in just now. What about those others?"

"By Jove, they're nearly here!"

"Then we'll have to warn 'em off. Get down to it, Tommy. Coral, keep back—and that's an order."

The two men flung themselves on their faces, just inside the doorway, and close against each side of it. They were thus in the shadow and it was impossible to see them from outside.

"We'll take the wing men—yours left, mine right," said Gun. They fired almost simultaneously.

The man on the left spun around, clutching his shoulder and cursing loudly. The one on the right gave no sign, but they all stopped short in their tracks. There were five of them all together, but one was now out of action.

"Again," said Gun.

They fired again, but this time no one was touched. The moonlight was tricky. But two of them ducked their heads, evidently having heard the bullets.

One said something that sounded like an order. They flung themselves down, and a moment later four of them opened fire. Three of them had rifles, the other a revolver, and the bullets whistled angrily. Two or three came right through the door, and plug-plugged into the concrete wall.

"Keep clear of the door, Coral," Gun called. But Tommy exclaimed, in a loud voice:

"Hell's bells, man, d'you realize what will happen if one of those bullets hits the right case?"

"I do," said Gun, and added grimly: "But we shall never know it's happened. And don't make a groan about it; we don't want Coral to know."

"Don't worry," interpolated a cool, feminine voice close behind him. "She knows already—not being entirely devoid of intelligence."

"Look out—they're creeping up," Tommy warned, in a hissing whisper.

Tigers Scrimmage For Groveport Engagement

With a long scrimmage behind them, Coach Roy Black's football boys are about ready to contest Groveport's well-balanced varsity on the high school field Friday evening.

The drill was a long one, five touchdowns being made, three by the varsity and two by the second team with Johnny Crawford, first string guard, going over for both touchdowns for the reserves after he was transplanted into the back-field.

GEHRINGER SET TO RETIRE FROM BASEBALL WARS

CINCINNATI, Oct. 9— As the Tigers rolled over on their backs to become dead cats yesterday a great ball player probably was playing his last scene.

Charley Gehringer is quitting. He doesn't think he'll be back next year because the spring of youth is no longer in his legs. After the game Gehringer confided to a friend: "I guess I'm turning in my uniform for the last time. The parade is going by me. Say, I told Jimmy Wilson today that when a man doesn't want to take batting practice I guess he's through. That's how I felt in this series."

Gehringer is 37, a bachelor. He had trouble with his back all last season. "It troubled me a lot last winter when I was shoveling snow," he said "and I wondered then if I could go on. I've had so many heat treatments that I feel like a baked apple. It's been tough staying in there this season."

Detroit will not be able to make a satisfactory replacement for Gehringer who has been with the Tigers for 16 years. Under the rule passed last winter the championship club can make no deals within the American League and so some newcomer must succeed Gehringer.

Gehringer's record in this series was the final convincer. He hit into three double plays, left 16 runners on base and made only 6 hits in 28 times at bat for a .214 average, lowest of all Detroit regulars except Sullivan and Tebbetts. He batted in only one run.

DETROIT CHEERS BEATEN TIGERS; NEWSOM LAUDED

DETROIT, Oct. 9—The crest-fallen Detroit Tigers were back home today assured of one thing—the home crowd was still with them.

With between 20,000 and 25,000 persons on hand to greet the runners-up in the World Series on arrival at the Michigan Central depot, it was old Bo-Bo Newsom that took most of the cheers.

A huge sign hung over the entrance to the building. "Welcome Tigers! You're guys didn't do so bad—Bo-Bo neither!" And Newsom, his shoulders sagging just a little and his eyes sad, seemed to perk up as he alighted from the train and as the cheers rolled through the building.

As he threaded his way through the path cleared for him by some of the 300 policemen on duty, hands reached out to touch him, and several persons rushed police aside to grasp the hand of the hurler.

Included among the spectators in the station was Judge K. M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball.

But his presence was all an accident, the judge explained. He said he had flown in from Cincinnati after the game and was merely waiting for his train to travel to his summer home on Burk Lake where he hopes to get in a little fishing.

Crawford ran well, and may see some backfield service Friday evening, according to Coach Black's plans.

All three varsity touchdowns were scored by Left End Johnny Woods, one being tallied when he covered a reserve fumble back of the goal line and two on passes from Geib.

All squad members appear ready for action Friday with the possible exception of Johnny Sabine, although the regular left tackle was in uniform Tuesday evening. He sprained his right wrist Sunday playing at the Country Club.

Bob Kline and Joe Staley, both of Coach Black's fullbacks, took part in Tuesday's drill despite ouchy ankles.

Groveport's team and Circleville's will average about the same in weight, most of the invader's poundage being in the middle of the line. The backs average 145 pounds, Peters, the fullback, being the biggest at 159.

Officials for Friday evening will be W. K. Dunton, who has worked two of Circleville's games this year; Gene Mechling of Capital U., and Henry Schroth of Muskingum College.

As tight and tense as this seventh setto between the Redlegs and the Bengals was, it was a strange game in its way. For, in the final analysis, it was won in a daze in the haze of an Indian summer afternoon, when for a weird moment every man on the field seemed to stop thinking at the same time.

That was when the tying run and, at the moment, that all-important run for the Reds, jogged casually over the plate, while the smart Dick Bartell stood in the middle of the field and held the ball that cost his team the championship.

Here was a hundred thousand dollar run. But from the way non-chalant Frank McCormick brought it trotting almost aimlessly across the plate, you would have thought it the tenth counter of a 10-to-0 game in the Grapefruit League in the spring.

All thought, all motion, almost all motion seemed to be suspended and to hang quiet there in the bright October air, while this slow motion bit of drama was being enacted.

Perhaps it was so important to the men of both teams that for the moment they could not quite realize it. Possibly for that instant when victory and defeat hung in the balance they were so keyed and tense that they really did act on habit and intuition alone.

I'm sure I don't know. All I know is that if Bartell had been his usually keen, chance-taking self, he could have whipped the dawdling Frank McCormick out at home with feet to spare. And, furthermore, that if he had done so Newsom and Derringer might have stood each other off until it was necessary to turn on the lights.

For they were both, Buck and Big Paul, close to invincible in this battle of keen skill and mounting tension, where one little break either way could have meant everything.

TRACK MARK LOWERED

MARYSVILLE, Oct. 9—A new world's two-year-old trotting record over a half-mile track was marked down in the record books today. Acrasia, owned by Henry Warwick of Cleveland and driven by Clint Hodgins stepped a mile in 2:06½ at the Union County oval. The previous record was held by Lovely who stepped a mile in 2:07½.

Junior Fair's Stock Show To Have Uptown Location

Chamber Of Commerce Puts Approval On Pickaway Street Site

SALE TO BE WEDNESDAY

Parade Arrangements Ready; Nine Nominees Listed For Miss Pumpkin Show

Receiving support from the Circleville Chamber of Commerce to place Junior Fair livestock exhibits at the Pickaway-Main Street intersection, Pumpkin Show and Junior Fair officials, Tuesday evening, decided to place their livestock tents in Pickaway Street on the north and south sides of Main Street.

Tuesday night's action followed several weeks of discussion concerning the location of the livestock exhibits, with residents along Pickaway Street protesting any move to place livestock tents in the neighborhood. Fair officials, however, believed no objection would be raised by placing the tents, two on each side of Main Street, at the Pickaway intersection.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce decided to back Junior Fair officials in their efforts to secure the Pickaway Street location after Harry Briggs, manager of the Pickaway Livestock Association, which is sponsoring the Junior Fair livestock sale Wednesday afternoon of the Pumpkin Show, protested efforts to move the exhibits to Western Avenue. Fat Stock, ordinarily of nervous temperament, would lose considerable weight if placed near the railroad, he said, and exhibitors could not expect buyers to pay top prices for their calves.

Stock Sale Scheduled

The fat-stock sale will be held immediately after the Wednesday afternoon sale at the livestock yards, Manager Briggs told Chamber of Commerce members at their meeting in the American Hotel Tuesday night.

Twenty-five of the county's best fat-stock will be sold.

Livestock, approximately 150 head, will be housed in four 40 by 60 tents. Fifty head of cattle, 50 sheep and 150 hogs will be exhibited.

Parade Chairman Dan McClain and Show Treasurer Robert Colville met with Junior Fair members in Superintendent George D. McDowell's office following the Chamber of Commerce meeting. Chairman McClain outlined the parade schedule for the show.

Parades will form on Watt Street, with the City and County parade scheduled for Wednesday afternoon, and the beauty parade for Wednesday evening.

Chairman McClain announced he believes the beauty parade will be one of the best features of the show. Nine beauty entrants have been received to date, Virgil Cress, in charge of the beauty contest, announced Wednesday. They are Alice Hartsough, Salt Creek; Annabelle Good, Stoutsville; Mary Sowers, Jackson; Virginia Wood, New Holland; Marie Adams, Pickaway; Betty Barthelmas, Williamsport; Jessie Baum, Ashville; Gloria Wilson, Circleville, and Joan Wertman, Washington.

The pet parade and judging of the class A floats will be staged on Thursday afternoon with the baby parade on Friday afternoon and the Junior Fair parade including the contest for the healthiest boy and healthiest girl from county schools on Saturday.

Paper caps will be worn by Junior Fair members at the show in order to distinguish them.

Desk Sponsored

The Junior Fair will sponsor again this year an information desk, with a registration book and a message book. Anyone wishing to leave a message for a friend may do so by writing the message in the book and anyone expecting a message may find it by looking in the book under the

NEW DANGER IN FAR EAST CITED

Uncle Sam Increases His Economic Pressure On Nipponese

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9—The United States government steadily increased economic pressures against Japan today and braced the nation for a showdown in the Far East.

From a government, taut and sensitive to the movement of every international shadow, word was broadcast that this country is ready to meet any eventuality.

No attempt was made to hide a belief that Great Britain's scheduled reopening of the Burma Road, the vital supply artery into China on October 17 might touch off the oriental powder keg. At the same time this government was placed squarely in support of this move by the reiterated words of Secretary of State Hull.

Japanese officials were on record with warnings that reopening of the Burma Road would be viewed by their government as an hostile act. The newly tightened Japanese-German-Italian alliance has freely declared action against any one point of the axis might bring the concerted action of all three against the offender.

In the face of this ominous array of circumstances, the United States pursued a firm and apparently relentless course of choking the stream of vital supplies from American shores to the Orient. New and broader moves were hinted as top-ranking government officials surveyed the critical situation in the Pacific during conferences held behind tightly closed doors.

Paralleling these steps, the work of clearing all possible Americans out of the Far East got under way at the state department. President Roosevelt "studied maps" with commanders of the nation's sea forces, and even removal of the handful of American marines in the affected areas was given consideration.

Freidrich Ernst Auhaugen, Nazi lecturer, and president of the Forum, who was seized in Los Angeles recently as he was attempting to board a ship for Japan. The committee is holding Auhaugen as a key witness.

Other evidence in its possession discloses the existence of a secret fascist army in the U. S. running into the thousands. Chief organizers of this force have been the German-American Bund, the Ku Klux Klan, Italian-American clubs and German veteran societies.

Linked up with all these operations is the German Library of Information, official Nazi propaganda agency in New York. A raid by committee agents produced a mailing list of over 70,000 names, banks and business concerns in the New York area alone.

ON THE BATTLEFRONT

REPS: Wendell Willkie's zealous wooing of Senator Hiram Johnson was not in vain. The Californian has privately decided to endorse him and will make a public declaration shortly.

A militant isolationist and long a foe of Britain, Johnson generally disapproves of Willkie's foreign views. But Johnson hates Roosevelt more than he dislikes Willkie's international ideas, so the latter will get his very considerate political blessing.

Much of the credit for this is due Senator Charles McNary. Johnson has long had a warm attachment for the astute Oregonian and McNary had no trouble persuading him to come out for Willkie, particularly after he counseled Johnson to say nothing until the expiration of the final date for an independent to file against Johnson.

Johnson still is undecided whether he will return to California for an active campaign. Not in the best of health, the chances are that he won't, but instead will make several speeches by radio.

DEMS: Senator David Walsh of Massachusetts is in a pickle. Up for election, he has Jim Farley's promise to make a speech for him. But Jim has let it be known that while he will speak for Walsh, he intends to say nothing in the talk about FDR. Publicly, Jim hasn't bolted, but he is as strongly anti-third term as ever.

Mayor LaGuardia, head of the Independent Voters Committee for Roosevelt and long thumbs-down on Farley, has taken up his ultimatum. "The Little Flower" has sent word to Walsh that if Farley doesn't endorse FDR in the speech, then he (LaGuardia) will come to Boston and make a speech for Roosevelt and not in FDR's name.

Walsh, caught in the middle, is wringing his hands. But the New Dealers are unmoved. They are saying to him, "You got Farley to agree to go to Boston: now you handle him. This is your baby. You fix it—or else."

MERRY-GO-ROUND

To disprove that all big business men favor appeasement, a group of leading industrialists shortly will issue a joint statement calling for maximum aid to Britain and an unyielding policy toward the Axis-Japanese alliance. W. L. Clayton, one of the biggest cotton merchants in the country, is a leader in the movement. . . . While General Hugh Johnson, ex-NRA boss, was blasting at Elliott Roosevelt for being given a "paper work" assignment as an Air Corps Captain, Johnson's son, Captain Kilbourne Johnston, a regular Army officer, got himself a desk job in the office of the Selective Administrator. . . . Baldish little Senator Alva Adams, Colorado isolationist who rates himself a big shot on the Senate Appropriations Committee, had his wings sharply clipped by the House. Adams struck out of the last defense funds bill an $80,000,000 item for a network of flying fields. Of this appropriation $30,000,000 was in cash and $50,000,000 authorization. Cuffing Adams aside, the House not only restored the item but upped the cash sum to $40,000,000. . . . Edward H. McCran, World War veteran, has proposed a new Army decoration to the War Department—a "Good Conduct Medal" that would be given to all honorably discharged veterans and draftees.

THOR GLADIRON

It's amazing how much simpler, faster, easier it is to do ironing of this kind beautifully on a THOR GLADIRON—the only ironer with a small enough roll to go IN-SIDE sleeves, as well as skirts, blouses, and similar garments. It also steams neckties, and velvets, presses suits, trousers. Irons puffed sleeves and curtains perfectly. Only the Thor Gladiron enables you to do all these things.
